NEW QUESTION: 3

You are responsible for an application that leverages the Amazon SDK and Amazon EC2 roles for storing and retrieving data from Amazon S3, accessing multiple DynamoDB tables, and exchanging message with Amazon SQS queues. Your VP of Compliance is concerned that you are not following security best practices for securing all of this access. He has asked you to verify that the application's AWS access keys are not older than six months and to provide control evidence that these keys will be rotated a minimum of once every six months.

Which option will provide your VP with the requested information?

- A. Create a new set of instructions for your configuration management tool that will periodically create and rotate the application's existing access keys and provide a compliance report to your VP.
- B. Create a script to query the IAM list-access keys API to get your application access key creation date and create a batch process to periodically create a compliance report for your VP.
- C. Provide your VP with a link to IAM AWS documentation to address the VP's key rotation concerns.
- D. Update your application to log changes to its AWS access key credential file and use a periodic Amazon EMR job to create a compliance report for your VP

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

The question is focusing on IAM roles rather than using access keys for accessing the services, AWS will take care of the temporary credentials provided through the roles in accessing these services.
