NEW QUESTION: 1

Alternative work schedules for employees are said to increase the efficiency of business operations. Alternative work schedules are consistent with the underlying concepts of which theory?

- A. Motivation-hygiene theory.
- B. Equity theory.
- C. Cognitive evaluation theory.

D. Theory X.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Herzberg's two-factor theory of human behavior postulates two classes of factors: motivational and hygiene. Hygiene factors (dissatisfiers) include those factors whose presence will not especially motivate people but whose absence will lead to diminished motivation. These factors are extrinsic to the work itself. They include status, interpersonal relations, and alternative work schedules. Hygiene factors such as work schedules need to be adequate so that workers will have little dissatisfaction. The absence of motivational factors (satisfiers) will not diminish performance, but their addition or availability will motivate employees. Intrinsic to the work itself, they include achievement, advancement, and recognition.
