NEW QUESTION: 1

An SELinux security context is required to ensure that all files in /opt have the default context of system_u:object_r:usr_t. How should the corresponding configuration entry be formatted?

- A. system_u:object_r:usr_t /opt/*
- B. system_u:object_r:usr_t: /opt/*
- C. system_u:object_r:usr_t /opt/*
- D. /opt/* system_u:object_r:usr_t
- E. /opt/* system_u:object_r:usr_t

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 2

The 192.168.0.0 network is not being propagated throughout the network. Observe the BGP configuration commands from the advertising router. What is the reason the 192.168.0.0 route is not being advertised?

```
router bgp 65111
neighbor 172.16.1.1 remote-as 65111
neighbor 172.16.2.1 remote-as 65112
network 192.168.0.0
network 10.0.0.0
```

```
ip route 192.168.0.0 255.255.0.0 null0
```

- A. The network 192.168.0.0 statement is missing mask 255.255.0.0
- B. The network 10.0.0.0 statement is missing mask 255.0.0.0.
- C. The network 10.0.0.0 statement is missing mask 0.255.255.255.
- D. The auto-summary configuration is missing.
- E. The network 192.168.0.0 statement is missing mask 0.0.255.255.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation The "network" statement in other routing protocols (EIGRP, OSPF, RIP...) is used to enable routing protocol on the interfaces within that "network" statement. But in BGP, the function of a network statement is to tell the router to search the IP routing table for a particular network, and if that network is found, originate it into the BGP database. But notice that you must have an exact match in the IP routing table to appear the network in the BGP routing table (in this case we don't see the auto-summary command so we suppose it is disabled in this case). For example:+ network 10.10.10.0/8 will appear in BGP if network 10.10.10.0/8 appears in the IP routing table.+ network 10.10.10.0/24 will appear in BGP if network 10.10.10.0/24 appears in the IP routing table. Therefore, in this question the static route "ip route 192.168.0.0 255.255.0.0 null0" was used to put a route to 192.168.0.0/16 into the routing table (although it points to Null0 but this command really makes that route appears in the routing table).

But the "network 192.168.0.0" statement tells the router to lookup network 192.168.0.0/24 (if the network statement under BGP-mode does not specify a subnet mask, the default subnet mask of that class will be used). The router only finds network 192.168.0.0/16 -> The network 192.168.0.0 is not being propagated throughout the network because of the mismatch of the subnet mask. Just for your information, in fact we have to suppose there is no entry of the network 192.168.0.0/24 exist in the routing table except the static route "ip route 192.168.0.0 255.255.0.0 null0. If such an entry exists (for example, a directly connected entry like "C 192.168.0.0/24 is directly connected") then the router still advertises it with the "network 192.168.0.0 (without mask 255.255.0.0) command.

NEW QUESTION: 3

During the growth stage of a product's life cycle,

- A. New product models and features are introduced.
- B. There is little difference between competing products.
- C. The quality of the products becomes more variable and products are less differentiated.
- D. The quality of products is poor.

Answer: A

Explanation:

In the growth stage, sales and profits increase rapidly, cost per customer decreases, customers are early adopters, new competitors enter an expanding market, new product models and features are introduced, and promotion spending declines or remains stable. The entity enters new market segments and distribution channels and attempts to build brand loyalty and achieve the maximum share of the market. Thus, prices are set to penetrate the market, distribution channels are extended, and the mass market is targeted through advertising. The strategy is to advance by these means and by achieving economies of productive scale.

NEW QUESTION: 4

A customer needs to limit the effect of broadcasts on their network. Which technology should they implement?

- A. Switch trunks
- B. VLANs
- C. Spanning Tree
- D. Link aggregations

Answer: B
