NEW QUESTION: 1

You are analyzing a dataset by using Azure Machine Learning Studio.

YOU need to generate a statistical summary that contains the p value and the unique value count for each feature column.

Which two modules can you users? Each correct answer presents a complete solution.

NOTE: Each correct selection is worth one point.

- A. Summarize Data
- B. Export Count Table

- C. Execute Python Script
- D. Compute linear Correlation
- E. Convert to Indicator Values

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

Explanation

The Export Count Table module is provided for backward compatibility with experiments that use the Build Count Table (deprecated) and Count Featurizer (deprecated) modules.

E: Summarize Data statistics are useful when you want to understand the characteristics of the complete dataset. For example, you might need to know:

How many missing values are there in each column?

How many unique values are there in a feature column?

What is the mean and standard deviation for each column?

The module calculates the important scores for each column, and returns a row of summary statistics for each variable (data column) provided as input.

NEW QUESTION: 2

A devops engineer wants to deploy a serverless web application based on AWS Lambda. The deployment must meet the following requirements:

- * Provide staging and production environments.
- * Restrict the developers from accessing the production environment.
- * Avoid hard coding passwords in the Lambda functions
- * Store source code in AWS CodeCommit.
- * Use AWS CodePipeline to automate the deployment.

Which solution will accomplish this?

A. Create separate staging and production accounts to segregate deployment targets. Use Lambda environment variables to store environment-specific values. Use CodePipeline to automate deployments with AWS CodeDeploy.

B. Define naming conventions for staging and production environments to segregate deployment targets. Use Lambda environment variables to store environment-specific values. Use CodePipeline to automate deployments with AWS CodeDeploy

C. Define tagging conventions for staging and production environments to segregate deployment targets. Use AWS KMS to store environment-specific values Use CodePipeline to automate deployments with AWS CodeDeploy.

D. Create separate staging and production accounts to segregate deployment targets. Use AWS KMS to store environment-specific values Use CodePipeline to automate deployments with AWS

CodeDeploy.

NEW QUESTION: 4

How does LLQ ensure that voice traffic is always expedited?

- A. The strict priority queue has a higher weight than the queues in CBWFQ. This weight allows the delay-sensitive data such as voice to be dequeued and sent first.
- B. The LLQ strict priority queue allows delay-sensitive data such as voice to be dequeued and sent first (before packets in other queues are dequeued), giving delay-sensitive data preferential treatment over other traffic.
- C. LLQ adds WRED to CBWFQ. This allows delay-sensitive data such as voice to be dequeued and sent first.
- D. LLQ uses CBWFQ to prioritize voice traffic and by dequeuing the voice packets so they can be handled first.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Without Low Latency Queueing, CBWFQ provides weighted fair queueing based on defined classes with no strict priority queue available for real-time traffic. This scheme poses problems for voice traffic that is largely intolerant of delay, especially variation in delay. For voice traffic, variations in delay introduce irregularities of transmission manifesting as jitter in the heard conversation. The Low Latency Queueing feature provides strict priority queueing for CBWFQ, reducing jitter in voice conversations. Configured by the priority command, Low Latency Queueing enables use of a single, strict priority queue within CBWFQ at the class level, allowing you to direct traffic belonging to a class to the CBWFQ strict priority queue.
