NEW QUESTION: 2

When examining SMB connections which are SteelHead optimized, you notice that for each IP client and server pair, there are often two connections created - one on destination port 139 and one on destination port 445. What is the reason for this?

- A. This is because SMB2 and CIFS optimization are both enabled on the SteelHeads.
- B. Clients often try to connect on port 139 and 445 simultaneously for compatibility reasons. Once one connection is accepted, the other gets reset.
- C. The server must be ignoring or resetting connections on port 139, so the client tries again on port 445.
- D. The server must be ignoring or resetting connections on port 445, so the client again on port 139.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Clients try to connect to 139 and 445 at the same time. Whatever ports gets the first response will be used for communications.
