NEW QUESTION: 1

When you are configuring the NIC teaming policy for a vSwitch, what happens when the Failback to Yes?

- A. A failed uplink is returned to active duty immediately upon recovery.
- B. The vswitch is notified when a failover event occurs.
- C. The physical switches are notified when a failback event occurs.
- D. A failed uplink will be left inactive upon recovery until another uplink fails.

Answer: A

Explanation:

* Select Yes or No to disable or enable failback. This option determines how a physical adapter is returned to active duty after recovering from a failure. If failback is set to Yes (default), the adapter is returned to active duty immediately upon recovery, displacing the standby adapter that took over its slot, if any. If failback is set to No, a failed adapter is left inactive even after recovery until another currently active adapter fails, requiring its replacement.
