NEW QUESTION: 1

EIGRP allows configuration of multiple MD5 keys for packet authentication to support easy rollover from an old key to a new key. Which two statements are true regarding the usage of multiple authentication keys? (Choose two.)

- A. Sent packets are authenticated by all valid keys, which means that each packet is replicated as many times as the number of existing valid keys.
- B. Sent packets are authenticated by the key with the smallest key ID
- C. Received packets are authenticated by any valid key that is chosen.
- D. Received packets are authenticated by the key with the smallest key ID.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

Suppose two routers are connected with each other via Fa0/0 interfaces and they are configured to authenticate via MD5. Below is a simple configuration on both routers so that they will work:

Router1(config)#key chain KeyChainR1
Router1(config-keychain)#key 1
Router1(config-keychain-key)#key-string FirstKey
Router1(config-keychain-key)#key 2
Router1(config-keychain-key)#key-string SecondKey
Router2(config)#key chain KeyChainR2
Router2(config-keychain)#key 1
Router2(config-keychain-key)#key-string FirstKey
Router2(config-keychain-key)#key 2
Router2(config-keychain-key)#key-string SecondKey
Apply these key chains to R1 & R2:
Router1(config)#interface fastEthernet 0/0
Router1(config-if)#ip authentication mode eigrp 1 md5
Router1(config-if)#ip authentication key-chain eigrp 1
KeyChainR1
Router2(config)#interface fastEthernet 0/0
Router2(config-if)#ip authentication mode eigrp 1 md5
Router2(config-if)#ip authentication key-chain eigrp 1
KeyChainR2

There are some rules to configure MD5 authentication with EIGRP:

- + The key chain names on two routers do not have to match (in this case the name "KeyChainR1" & "KeyChainR2" do not match)
- + The key number and key-string on the two potential neighbors must match (for example "key 1" & "key-string

FirstKey" must match on "key 1" & "key-string FirstKey" of neighboring router)

Also some facts about MD5 authentication with EIGRP

+ When sending EIGRP messages the lowest valid key number is used -> D is correct.

+ When receiving EIGRP messages all currently configured valid keys are verified but the lowest valid one will be used -> Although answer C does not totally mention like that but it is the most suitable answer because A and B are totally wrong.

Answer A is not correct because we need valid key to authenticate.

As mentioned above, although answer C is not totally correct but it puts some light on why answer B is not correct:

each packet is NOT "replicated as many times as the number of existing valid keys". All currently configured valid keys are verified but the lowest valid one will be used.
