Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 2

Your network contains a System Center 2012 Configuration Manager environment.

The environment contains a single primary site.

The primary site has a distribution point and a management point.

You need to recommend a communication solution that meets the following requirements:

- Communication between the client computers in the research department and the management point must use HTTPS.
- Communication between all of the other client computers and the management point must be able to use HTTP.
- Minimize the number of site system.

What should you do?

- A. Install a new management point and configure Windows Firewall to block outbound TCP port 80. Configure the research department computers always to use HTTPS.
- B. Configure the existing management point to use HTTPS. Configure the research department computers always to use HTTPS.
- C. Install a new management point and configure the management point always to use HTTPS. Configure the research department computers always to use HTTPS.
- D. Create a new primary child site and configure the site to use native mode. Assign all of the research department computers to the new site.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Create one additional management point that uses HTTPS, and configure research to use it.

Note: Optional Site System Roles

Optional site system roles are site system roles that are not required for the core operation of a Configuration Manager site. However, by default, the management point and distribution point, which are optional site system roles, are installed on the site server when you install a primary or secondary site. Although these two site system roles are not required for the core operation of the site, you must have at least one management point to support clients at those locations. After you install a site, you can move the default location of the management point or distribution point to another server, install additional instances of each site system role, and install other optional site system roles to meet your business requirements. The optional site system roles are described in the following table:

A site system role that provides policy and service location information to clients and receives configuration data from clients.

You must install at least one management point at each primary site that manages clients, and at each secondary site where you want to provide a local point of contact for clients to obtain computer and user policies.
