D. Enter Assessment Template Details --> Configure Ratings --> Enter Questions and Responses --> Associate Task Templates --> Configure Score Rating attributes--> EditQuestions/ Weights

E. Enter Assessment Template Details --> Configure Ratings --> Enter Questions & Responses -> Edit Questions/Weights --> Configure Score Rating attributes --> Associate Task Templates

Answer: E

Explanation:

Ratings A rating is a textual qualification such as Excellent. There are three delivered ratings in the assessment template: Excellent, Average, and Poor. Ratings provide a metric other than a numerical score for qualifying the outcome of an assessment. Ratings are created at the beginning of the assessment template creation process (not B, not D, not E). They are later applied to possible responses to questions in the template, which associates each rating with a score. An appropriate feedback will be displayed to you based on the completed assessment score once you submit an assessment. When setting up ratings and applying them to possible responses, it is important to remember that they and their associated feedback text will eventually display as part of the overall assessed health of a business object.

Associated Task Templates A task template is an instruction to generate a group of related activities. You can associate task templates with an assessment template in order to recommend tasks that should be performed after an assessment has been done for a business object. When you associate task templates with an assessment template, you can indicate a score range for each task template, and based on the total score of any assessment that uses your template, one or more task templates will be recommended as follow-up activities. In order for a task template to be available to associate with an assessment template, it must be assigned to the same business object type as that assigned to the assessment template, and it must have a subtype of Assessment. Ensure that you have set up task templates correctly before attempting to associate them to assessment templates (not A).

ITIL is a framework of best practices for organizations that want to deliver products and services reliably and efficiently. It is a set of processes, roles, and responsibilities that help organizations manage their IT services. The change management process is a key part of ITIL. It involves the creation of the official Request for Change (RFC) ticket, which is used to document the change, obtain the required approvals from management and stakeholders, and track the change to completion. Release management is a subcomponent of change management, where the actual code or configuration change is put into place. Deployment management is similar to release management, but it's where changes are actually implemented on systems. Problem management is focused on the identification and mitigation of known problems and deficiencies before they are able to occur.
