NEW QUESTION: 4

Note: This question is part of a series of questions that use the same scenario. For your convenience, the scenario is repeated in each question. Each question presents a different goal and answer choices, but the text of the scenario is exactly the same in each question in this series.

You have a database named Sales that contains the following database tables: Customer, Order, and Products.

The Products table and the Order table are shown in the following diagram.

The customer table includes a column that stores the data for the last order that the customer placed.

You plan to create a table named Leads. The Leads table is expected to contain approximately 20,000 records.

Storage requirements for the Leads table must be minimized. Changes to the price of any product must be less a 25 percent increase from the current price. The shipping department must be notified about order and shipping details when an order is entered into the database.

You need to implement the appropriate table objects. Which object should you use for each table? To answer, drag the appropriate objects to the correct tables. Each object may be used once, more than once, or not at all. You may need to drag the split bar between panes or scroll to view content.

Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation

The Products table needs a primary key constraint on the ProductID field.

The Orders table needs a foreign key constraint on the ProductID field, with a reference to the ProductID field in the Products table.
