NEW QUESTION: 1

Which of the following is NOT a commonly used communications method within cloud environments to secure data in transit?

- A. DNSSEC
- B. HTTPS
- C. IPSec
- D. VPN

Answer: A

Explanation:

DNSSEC is used as a security extension to DNS lookup queries in order to ensure the authenticity and authoritativeness of hostname resolutions, in order to prevent spoofing and redirection of traffic. Although it is a very important concept to be employed for security practices, it is not used to secure or encrypt data transmissions. HTTPS is the most commonly used security mechanism for data communications between clients and websites and web services.

IPSec is less commonly used, but is also intended to secure communications between servers.

VPN is commonly used to secure traffic into a network area or subnet for developers and administrative users.

NEW QUESTION: 2

A timely review of system access audit records would be an example of which of the basic security functions?

- A. prevention
- B. deterrence
- C. avoidance
- D. detection

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

By reviewing system logs you can detect events that have occurred.

The following answers are incorrect:

avoidance. This is incorrect, avoidance is a distractor. By reviewing system logs you have not avoided anything.

deterrence. This is incorrect because system logs are a history of past events. You cannot deter something that has already occurred.

prevention. This is incorrect because system logs are a history of past events. You cannot prevent something that has already occurred.
