NEW QUESTION: 1

- A. xPlat Azure CLI
- B. Cloud-Init
- C. Chef

D. Puppet

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

Explantion:

Cloud-init is a widely used approach to customize a Linux VM as it boots for the first time. You can use cloud-init to install packages and write files, or to configure users and security. Because cloud-init is called during the initial boot process, there are no additional steps or required agents to apply your configuration.

We are actively working with our endorsed Linux distro partners in order to have cloud-init enabled images available in the Azure marketplace. These images make your cloud-init deployments and configurations work seamlessly with VMs and virtual machine scale sets. The following table outlines the current cloud-init enabled images availability on the Azure platform:

NEW QUESTION: 3

In an xCP application, every queue processor is given one of two skills. A document review process has a package that has an attribute `required_skill` that is always set to one of those skills. What is the EMC best practice to ensure queue processors only receive tasks that match their skill?

- A. Create the skills on the queue's work queue policy, and then use an activity template to map `required_skill` to the queue assigned as the next activity's performer.
- B. Assign the queue as the performer of the manual activity, then use the data mapper tool to associate `required_skill` to the skill on the activity.
- C. Assign the queue as the performer of the manual activity and create an alias set for each skill, then store `required_skill` as the workflow alias and use the data mapper tool to assign the skill to the activity.
- D. Create an ACL for each skill and add the appropriate users to each, then use a Process Data Mapper activity to map `required_skill` to the `acl_name` of the workitem.
