NEW QUESTION: 1

When a new network drop was installed, the cable was run across several fluorescent lights. The users of the new network drop experience intermittent connectivity. Which of the following environmental controls was MOST likely overlooked during installation?

- A. Channel interference
- B. Humidity sensors
- C. EMI shielding
- D. Cable kinking

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

Shielding refers to the process of preventing electronic emissions from your computer systems from being used to gather intelligence and preventing outside electronic emissions from disrupting your information-processing abilities. In this case you are experiencing intermittent connectivity since Electro Magnetic Interference (EMI) was not taken into account when running the cables over fluorescent lighting.

NEW QUESTION: 2

A. Option C

B. Option A

C. Option B

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

Option A is an invalid option since Lifecycle policies are normally used for expiration of objects or archival of objects.

Option B is partially correct where you store the data in DynamoDB, but then the number of GET requests would still be high if the entire DynamoDB table had to be traversed and each object compared and updated in S3.

Option D is invalid because uploading all files to Clastic Cache is not an ideal solution.

The best option is to have a notification which can then trigger an update to the application to update the DynamoDB table accordingly.
