NEW QUESTION: 1

Note: This question is part of a series of questions that present the same scenario. Each question in the series contains a unique solution that might meet the stated goals. Some question sets might have more than one correct solution, while others might not have a correct solution.

After you answer a question in this section, you will NOT be able to return to it. As a result, these questions will not appear in the review screen.

You are developing an application that will run as an Azure API App. The application tracks flights between airports, including duration of flight, if the flight was on time, the capacity of the airplane, and the number of seats sold. Queries can be performed to show multiple routes, multi-leg journeys, and filtering based on the attributes of the flight.

Flight information will be used by customers to perform data mining, drive interactive display, perform airspace tracking, and other applications.

Customers require that the response time of the API be as low as possible, both for retrieving information for a single flight, and for queries across flights. To achieve the required level of performance, each API invocation must be satisfied by a single operation against the data store containing flight information.

You need to implement the data store for this application.

Solution: You use Azure Blob Storage.

Does the solution meet the goal?

A. Yes

B. No

Answer: B
