NEW QUESTION: 1

Which Cisco Catalyst feature automatically disables the port in an operational PortFast upon receipt of a BPDU?

- A. UplinkFast
- B. BPDU Guard
- C. Root Guard
- D. BackboneFast
- E. BPDU Filter

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 2

Refer to the exhibit. Which of these is applied to the Bearer class?

- A. packet classification
- B. FIFO queuing within the class
- C. packet marking
- D. traffic shaping
- E. wred

Answer: B

Explanation:

Within a class queue, processing is always FIFO, except for the class-default queue.

CBWFQ supports 64 queues, with a maximum and default queue length varying depending on the model of router and the amount of memory installed. All 64 queues can be configured, but one class queue, called class-default, is automatically configured. If the explicitly configured classification does not match a packet, IOS places the packet into the class-default class. Currently, CBWFQ can use either FIFO or WFQ inside the class-default queue. With Flow-Based WFQ in the class-default queue, when CBWFQ decides to take one or more packets from the queue, it takes the packet with the best sequence number (SN) - just like WFQ normally does.

Cisco 7500 series routers support either FIFO or WFQ inside each and every CBWFQ queue, whereas other platforms only support both FIFO and WFQ inside CBWFQ's class-default queue. If the default class is allocated a bandwidth, WFQ cannot be enabled for the traffic within the default class. This is true for all platforms except the 7500 (and soon the 7200).

Currently (except for the Cisco 7500 router platform) all traffic classes except for the default traffic class support only FIFO queuing within the class.

On all platforms, the default traffic class can support either FIFO or WFQ within the class. But if the default traffic class is allocated a minimum bandwidth as shown in the figure, WFQ will not be supported in the default traffic class. The only current exception is for the Cisco 7500 series platforms. In this case, the default traffic class will support only FIFO queuing.

B. No

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 4

Your supervisor has given you the task of creating an elastic network interface on each of your web servers that connect to a mid-tier network where an application server resides. He also wants this set up as a Dual-homed Instance on Distinct Subnets. Instead of routing network packets through the dual-homed instances, where should each dual-homed instance receive and process requests to fulfil his criteria?

A. On one of the web servers

B. On the back end

C. Through a security group

D. On the front end

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation

You can place an elastic network interface on each of your web servers that connects to a mid- tier network where an application server resides. The application server can also be dual-homed to a back-end network (subnet) where the database server resides. If it is set up like this, instead of routing network packets through the dual-homed instances, each dual-homed instance receives and processes requests on the front end and initiates a connection to the back end before finally sending requests to the servers on the back-end network.
