NEW QUESTION: 1

What is Phantom RP used for?

- A. it is used for redundancy in bidirectional PIM
- B. it is used for load balancing in bidirectional PIM
- C. it is used for load balancing in PIM-SM
- D. it is used for redundancy in PIM-SM

Answer: A

Explanation:

Phantom RP In Bidirectional PIM (Bidir-PIM), the RP does not have an actual protocol function. The RP acts as a routing vector in which all the traffic converges. The RP can be configured as an address that is not assigned to any particular device called a Phantom RP. This means that the RP address does not need to reside on a physical router interface, but can just be an address in a subnet. The RP can also be a physical router, but it is not necessary.
