NEW QUESTION: 3

What is the goal of a black-box penetration testing?

- A. To simulate a user to include customizable scripts, additional tools and configurable kernels in personalized distributions
- B. To simulate an attacker who has some knowledge of the organization and its infrastructure
- C. To simulate an external hacking or cyber warfare attack
- D. To simulate a malicious insider who has some knowledge and possibly basic credentials to the target system

Answer: C

Explanation:

Black Box is a kind of Penetration testing, which assumes no prior knowledge of the infrastructure to be tested. The testers must first determine the location and extent of the systems before commencing their analysis. Black box testing simulates an attack from someone who is unfamiliar with the system.
