NEW QUESTION: 2

What four layer 2 MPLS VPN parameters are collected from a customer service record database to troubleshoot a VPN connectivity issue? (Choose four)

- A. PE loopback information
- B. Layer 2 MPLS VPN service type
- C. Unique service identifier
- D. Attachment circuit information
- E. UNI interface encapsulation
- F. Hop-by-hop LDP information
- G. Virtual circuit ID information

Answer: B,D,E,G

Explanation:

Virtual Circuit Connection Verification (VCCV) is an L2VPN Operations, Administration, and Maintenance (OAM) feature that allows network operators to run IP-based provider edge (PE)-to-PE keepalive protocol across a specified pseudowire to ensure that the pseudowire data path forwarding does not contain any faults. The destination PE receives VCCV packets on a control channel, which is associated with the specified pseudowire. The control channel type and connectivity verification type, which are used for VCCV, are negotiated when the pseudowire is established between the PEs for each direction.

Two types of packets can arrive at the destination egress:

Type 1-Specifies normal Ethernet over MPLS (EoMPLS) data packets.

Type 2-Specifies VCCV packets. Before you can implement MPLS L2VPN on a connection, you must create and configure an attachment circuit (AC) to host L2VPN, Supported Ethernet

Encapsulation on UNI The Ethernet User-Network Interface (UNI) is the connection between a cable modem and customer premise equipment such as a router or a switch. The service provider may or may not use any encapsulation on the UNI. The MPLS Pseudowire for Cable L2VPN feature supports the following transport types on an Ethernet UNI:

Port-based UNI (independent of any VLAN)-The port-based UNI provides Metro Ethernet Forum (MEF)-defined Ethernet Private Line (EPL) service. In this transport type, an MPLS pseudowire is mapped to the Ethernet port.

VLAN-based UNI-Ethernet VLAN using 802.1q encapsulation (including stacked VLANs). The VLAN-based UNI provides MEF-defined Ethernet Virtual Private Line (EVPL) service. In this transport type, the MPLS pseudowire is mapped to the 802.1q VLAN
