Which choice below is NOT an accurate statement about an organization's incident-handling capability?

- A. The organization's incident-handling capability should be used to contain and repair damage done from incidents.
- B. It should be used to provide the ability to respond quickly and effectively to an incident.
- C. It should be used to prevent future damage from incidents.
- D. The organization's incident-handling capability should be used to detect and punish senior-level executive wrong-doing.

Answer: D

Explanation:

An organization should address computer security incidents by developing an incident-handling capability. The incident-handling capability should be used to: Provide the ability to respond quickly and effectively. Contain and repair the damage from incidents. When left unchecked, malicious software can significantly harm an organization's computing, depending on the technology and its connectivity. Containing the incident should include an assessment of whether the incident is part of a targeted attack on the organization or an isolated incident. Prevent future damage. An incident-handling capability should assist an organization in preventing (or at least minimizing) damage from future incidents. Incidents can be studied internally to gain a better understanding of the organization's threats and vulnerabilities.
