NEW QUESTION: 2

You are managing a network environment in which clients that are successfully postured obtain a new VLAN IP address. Which timer can you use to increase the allowable amount of time for the client to undergo CoA?

- A. keep alive timer
- B. network transition delay timer
- C. minimum acceptable hold timer
- D. remediation timer

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

Explanation/Reference

You can configure the timer for clients to transition from one state to the other state within a specified time using the network transition delay timer, which is required for Change of Authorization (CoA) to complete. It may require a longer delay time when clients need time to get a new VLAN IP address during success and failure of posture. When successfully postured, Cisco ISE allows clients to transition from unknown to compliant mode within the time specified in the network transition delay timer. Upon failure of posture, Cisco ISE allows clients to transition from unknown to noncompliant mode within the time specified in the timer.

Step 1 Choose Administration > System > Settings > Posture > General Settings . Step 2 Enter a time value in seconds, in the Network Transition Delay field.

The default value is 3 seconds. The valid range is 2 to 30 seconds. Step 3 Click Save .
