The following commands are entered on the router:

```
Burbank(config)# enable secret fortress
Burbank(config)# line con 0
Burbank(config-line)# login
Burbank(config-line)# password n0way1n
Burbank(config-line)# exit
```

Burbank(config)# service password-encryption

What is the purpose of the last command entered?

- A. to encrypt the enable secret password
- B. to provide login encryption services between hosts attached to the router
- C. to prevent the vty, console, and enable passwords from being displayed in plain text in the configuration files
- D. to require the user to enter an encrypted password during the login process

Answer: C

Explanation:

Certain types of passwords, such as Line passwords, by default appear in clear text in the configuration file. You can use the service password-encryption command to make them more secure. Once this command is entered, each password configured is automatically encrypted and thus rendered illegible inside the configuration file (much as the Enable/Enable Secret passwords are). Securing Line passwords is doubly important in networks on which TFTP servers are used, because TFTP backup entails routinely moving config files across networks-and config files, of course, contain Line passwords.
