NEW QUESTION: 1

During a service modeling process it is noticed that several service candidates contain similar service capabilities that are responsible for logging status information. The service analysts worry that the services will eventually end up containing redundant logic. Which of the following approaches is suitable for addressing this problem?

- A. Logging functionality will always need to reside in different services, and there is nothing that can be done to resolve the redundancy of these service capabilities.
- B. The logging service capabilities are moved from the service candidates into a non-agnostic task service candidate that is
