Which best describes what the `map` method accepts and emits?

- A. It accepts a single key-value pairs as input and can emit any number of key-value pair as output, including zero.
- B. It accepts a list key-value pairs as input and can emit only one key-value pair as output.
- C. It accepts a single key-value pairs as input and can emit only one key-value pair as output.
- D. It accepts a single key-value pair as input and emits a single key and list of corresponding values as output.

Answer: A

Explanation:

```
public class Mapper<KEYIN,VALUEIN,KEYOUT,VALUEOUT> extends Object

Maps input key/value pairs to a set of intermediate key/value pairs.

Maps are the individual tasks which transform input records into a intermediate records. The transformed intermediate records need not be of the same type as the input records. A given input pair may map to zero or many output pairs.
