NEW QUESTION: 2

How do covert timing channels convey information?

- A. By generating noise and traffic with the data
- B. By modifying the timing of a system resource in some measurable way
- C. By performing a covert channel analysis
- D. By changing a system's stored data characteristics

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is "By modifying the timing of a system resource in some measurable way". A covert timing channel alters the timing of parts of the system to enable it to be used to communicate information covertly (outside the normal security function).

*Answer "By changing a system's stored data characteristics" is the description of the use of a covert storage channel.

*"By generating noise and traffic with the data" is a technique to combat the use of covert channels.

*Answer "By performing a covert channel analysis" is the Orange Book requirement for B3, B2, and A1 evaluated systems.
