NEW QUESTION: 1

Refer to the Exhibit.

An administrator is reviewing a vSphere Distributed Resource Scheduler (DRS) enabled Cluster and observes unexpected behavior as shown in the Exhibit.

What are three potential causes of the cluster imbalance? (Choose three.)

- A. vMotion is not configured and enabled.
- B. DRS has been configured for a conservative migration threshold.
- C. There are insufficient cluster resources to perform the migration.
- D. DRS rules prevent virtual machines from being moved.
- E. A local device is mounted to one or more virtual machines.

Answer: A,D,E

Explanation:

Cluster imbalance is often caused by a local device mounted to one or more VMs and the DRS rules are preventing the VMs from being moved. Similarly, check vMotion to see if it is configured and enabled.

NEW QUESTION: 2

NEW QUESTION: 3

Which feature of z Systems processor virtualization reduces the latency of cross partition communications?

- A. QuickPath Interconnect (QPI)
- B. HiperSockets
- C. HyperTransport
- D. Jupiter Interconnect System Bus Architecture

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Mainframe HiperSockets is a technology that provides high-speed TCP/IP connectivity within a central processor complex. It eliminates the need for any physical cabling or external networking connection between servers running in different LPARs (logical partitions).

The communication is through the system memory of the processor, so servers are connected to form a "internal LAN."

Incorrect Answers:

A: Intel QuickPath Technology uses Intel QuickPath Interconnect, which provides high-speed, point-to-point links inside and outside of the processor. In contrast to parallel buses, these links speed up data transfers by connecting distributed shared memory, the internal cores, the I/O hub, and other Intel® processors.
