- A. only for applications with a stable usage pattern but extremely high workload.
- B. Both for applications that have stable demand patterns and that experience hourly, daily, or weekly variability in usage.
- C. only for applications that experience hourly, daily, or weekly variability in usage.
- D. Both for applications that use frameworks and SDKs to enhance its customer relationship.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

Auto Scaling is well suited to both applications that have stable demand patterns and that experience hourly, daily, or weekly variability in usage. Whether the demand is predictable or unpredictable auto scaling can be a good choice. If the demand is predictable and long term you may choose reserved instances. If the demand is unpredictable you may choose on-demand or even spot instance (if you can afford to have an instance lost unexpectedly).
