Explanation:

DB1: DELAYED_DURABILITY=FORCED

From scenario: Thousands of records are inserted into DB1 or updated each second. Inserts are made by many different external applications that your company's developers do not control. You observe that transaction log write latency is a bottleneck in performance. Because of the transient nature of all the data in this database, the business can tolerate some data loss in the event of a server shutdown.

With the DELAYED_DURABILITY=FORCED setting, every transaction that commits on the database is delayed durable.

With the DELAYED_DURABILITY= ALLOWED setting, each transaction's durability is determined at the transaction level.

Note: Delayed transaction durability reduces both latency and contention within the system because:

- * The transaction commit processing does not wait for log IO to finish and return control to the client.

- * Concurrent transactions are less likely to contend for log IO; instead, the log buffer can be flushed to disk in larger chunks, reducing contention, and increasing throughput.

DB2: ALLOW_SNAPSHOT_ISOLATION ON and READ_COMMITTED_SNAPSHOT ON Snapshot isolation enhances concurrency for OLTP applications. Snapshot isolation must be enabled by setting the ALLOW_SNAPSHOT_ISOLATION ON database option before it is used in transactions.

The following statements activate snapshot isolation and replace the default READ COMMITTED behavior with SNAPSHOT:

ALTER DATABASE MyDatabase
SET ALLOW_SNAPSHOT_ISOLATION ON
ALTER DATABASE MyDatabase
SET READ_COMMITTED_SNAPSHOT ON
```

Setting the READ_COMMITTED_SNAPSHOT ON option allows access to versioned rows under the default READ COMMITTED isolation level.

From scenario: The DB2 database was migrated from SQLServer 2012 to SQL Server 2016. Thousands of records are updated or inserted per second. You observe that the WRITELOG wait type is the highest aggregated wait type. Most writes must have no tolerance for data loss in the event of a server shutdown. The business has identified certain write queries where data loss is tolerable in the event of a server shutdown.

The Service-Oriented Integration architecture makes a distinction between technical orchestrations and business processes. Which statement best describes these two concepts?

- A. Business processes are implemented using BPMN, whereas technical orchestrations are Implemented using BPEL.
- B. A technical orchestration is a low-level implementation detail and has no relationship to business processes.
- C. A business processes is likely to change when the business changes, whereas a technical orchestration is likely to change when back-end systems change.
- D. Each business process is implemented by calling a sequence of SOA Services. This sequential calling of SOA Services Is what is known as a technical orchestration.
- E. A business process that is implemented within SOI is called a technical orchestration.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Technical orchestration is separated from business processes. Making a clear distinction between technical aspects and business aspects facilitates maintenance of both. Technical aspects change when the underlying systems change whereas business aspects change when the business changes.
