In SharePoint 2007 if you rename or move a document then all the existing links to it will be broken. Naturally, this leads to angry users and headaches for IT support and simply put, it affects productivity, especially if happens often. With SharePoint 2010 this issue is resolved by the introduction of Document ID functionality. Basically, each document gets a unique ID that, regardless of its location, remains the same. This means that when you move or rename a document this ID will not change. So you end up with a static or permanent link to your documents. You will see later in this tip how this unique ID is used in a special URL to access the document. Let's see how you can configure and use Document IDs in SharePoint 2010.

1. Browse to your SharePoint site and navigate to the site settings page. Click on the Site Collection Features link located under Site Collection Administration section. Locate the Document ID Service and click Activate.
