Starting Point

A runbook can only have one starting point. A starting point is an activity that automatically runs when the runbook is started. Each activity in the runbook runs after the previous activity in the workflow is complete. If a runbook starts with any activity other than a monitor, the runbook begins processing and attempts to run to completion. If the runbook starts with a monitor activity, the monitor loads and waits for the trigger condition. Once the condition is met, a runbook instance is created to run the remaining activities in the runbook. The monitor continues to run and wait another occurrence of the trigger condition. Runbooks that start with monitors continue to run until you stop them from the Runbook Designer or Orchestration console.
