NEW QUESTION: 2

What is the purpose of a BGP confederation?

- A. It improves service by increasing the number of simultaneous iBGP peering sessions.
- B. It limits the number of routes a device receives from its peers, which reduces CPU load.

- D. It reduces the number of iBGP peers and increases stability.

Answer: D

Which of the following is not a valid PBR monitoring mode of operation? (Choose three.)

- A. FALSE
- B. TRUE
- C. RMON mode (based on RMONv1 and RMONv2 data)
- D. passive mode (based on NetFlow data)
- E. route monitor mode (based on BGP route changes)
- F. fast mode (based on Cisco IP SLA probes)
- G. active mode (based on Cisco IP SLA probes)
- H. passive mode (based on Cisco IP SLA probes)

Answer: B,D,E

Explanation:

Modes are:

Mode monitor passive

Passive monitoring is the act of PBR gathering information on user packets assembled into flows by Netflow. Passive monitoring is typically only recommended in Internet edge deployments because active probing is ineffective because of security policies that block probing. PBR, when enabled, automatically enables Netflow on the managed interfaces on the Border Routers. By aggregating this information on the Border Routers and periodically reporting the collected data to the Master Controller, the network prefixes and applications in use can automatically be learned.

Mode monitor active

Active monitoring is the act of generating Cisco IOS IP Service Level Agreements (SLAs) probes to generate test traffic for the purpose of obtaining information regarding the characteristics of the WAN links. PfR can either implicitly generate active probes when passive monitoring has identified destination hosts, or the network manager can explicitly configure probes in the PfR configuration. When jitter probes are used (common use case), Target Discovery is used to learn the respond address and to automatically generate the probes.

Mode monitor Fast

This mode generates active probes through all exits continuously at the configured probe frequency. This differs from either active or both modes in that these modes only generate probes through alternate paths (exits) in the event the current path is out-of-policy. Reference.
