Chaincode is a decentralized transactional program, running on the validating nodes. As with every chaincode, it implements the _____ in particular, Init and Invoke functions.

What does it actually implement?

- A. REST Interface
- B. SDK
- C. EVM
- D. Chaincode interface

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation

Chaincode is a decentralized transactional program, running on the validating nodes. As with every chaincode, it implements the Chaincode interface in particular, Init and Invoke functions. Init is called during Instantiate transaction after the chaincode container has been established for the first time, allowing the chaincode to initialize its internal data. Invoke is called to update or query the ledger in a proposal transaction. Updated state variables are not committed to the ledger until the transaction is committed.
