NEW QUESTION: 1

An application developer needs to send data to an iOS native page that will use the data that the user captured on a new web page. To accomplish this task, the developer needs to verify that the native page is implemented as an Objective-C class that inherits from a specific iOS class.

What is the name of the class the application developer must verify that the native page should inherit from?

A. UIDocumentInteractionController

- B. UIDocumentInteractionControllerDelegate
- C. UIViewController
- D. UIManagedDocument

Answer: C

Explanation:

Adding the native features using Worklight NativePage API
Following the Worklight NativePage API documentation, native features are accessed by extending the UIViewController class. The instructions assume familiarity with using XCode, iOS programming and Objective-C. Example: Integrating the native address book

- In XCode, right-click Classes > New File. Select iOS > Cocoa Touch > Objective-C class. Click Next. - Following the definition in WCHybridAppProperties.js, in the Class field, name the class ContactsViewController. Ensure that Subclass of is set to UIViewController. Select With XIB for user interface. Click Next. Etc. References:
