NEW QUESTION: 3

The Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) retains a certification of age for all employees for how long?

- A. 1 year
- B. 2 years
- C. Until employee termination
- D. 3 years
- E. 5 years

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation: The Fair Labor Standards Act requires that companies maintain a certification of age on file for all employees until their employment is terminated. The certification of age simply shows that the employee can legally work for the company in the capacity in which he or she was hired. Once the employment has been terminated, it is no longer necessary to maintain a certification of age. Answer choices A, B, C, and D all represents time periods that could be true depending on the time that an employee is with a company, but they are not technically correct based on the wording of the law.
