Amazon Kinesis Data Stream is a service that lets you capture and store streaming data for real-time analytics. AWS Lambda is a serverless compute service that lets you run code without provisioning or managing servers. You can use Lambda to process data from a Kinesis Data Stream. The code runs in response to events from the stream and can write the processed data to other services like Amazon S3 or Amazon Redshift. This setup allows you to build a data pipeline that can handle large volumes of data and process it in real-time.
