- B. To move new or changed components to live environments
- C. To make new or changed services available for use
- D. To set clear business-based targets for service performance

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 2

You want all your colleagues to be able to access the compute node associated with an Oracle Database Cloud

- Database as a Service (DBaaS) instance. You want them to do so by using a custom host name rather than an IP address regardless of the client machine (personal or provided by the company) that they use for the access.

How would you enable this access?

- A. Configure the Advanced Security Option (ASO).
- B. Enable secure access to the DBaaS instance VM and database instance from remote hosts by using SSH.
- C. Resolve your domain name to the IP address of the DBaaS compute node by using the third-party domain registration vendor console.

D. Edit the machine's/etc/hostsfile.

E. Contact the administrator of your company's intranet DNS and request a custom DNS record for the compute node's public IP address.

Answer: E

Explanation:

Explanation

You can associate a custom host name or domain name to the public IP address of a compute node associated with your Oracle Database Cloud Service environment.

To associate a custom host name to the public IP address of a compute node, contact the administrator of your DNS (Domain Name Service) and request a custom DNS record for the compute node's public IP address. For example, if your domain is example.com and you wanted to use clouddb1 as the custom host name for a compute node, you would request a DNS record that associates clouddb1.example.com to your compute node's public IP address.
