NEW QUESTION: 1

What is a disadvantage of storage array based local replication?

- A. Replication is performed at the array device level
- B. Requires an alternate host for Business Continuance operations
- C. Cannot span storage arrays
- D. Uses host CPU resources

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 2

Refer to Exhibit:

Which type of replication is represented in the exhibit?

- A. Triangle/multitarget, synchronous + disk buffered
- B. Cascade/multihop, synchronous + disk buffered
- C. Cascade/multihop, synchronous + asynchronous
- D. Triangle/multitarget, synchronous + differential resync

Answer: B

Explanation:

Three-site Replication: Cascade/Multiphop (Synchronous + Disk Buffered) In the cascade/multihop three-site replication, data flows from the source to the intermediate storage array, known as a bunker, in the first hop, and then, from a bunker to a storage array at a remote site in the second hop. Replication can be performed in two ways, synchronous+ disk-buffered or synchronous + asynchronous.

Synchronous + Disk Buffered: This method employs a combination of local and remote replication technologies. Synchronous replication occurs between the source and the bunker; a consistent PIT local replica is created at the bunker. Data is transmitted from the local replica at the bunker to the remote replica at the remote site. Optionally, a local replica can be created at the remote site after data is received from the bunker. In this method, a minimum of 4 storage volumes are required (including the source) to replicate one storage device. RPO at the remote site is usually in the order of hours for this implementation.
