In your database, the CURSOR_SHARING parameter is set to FORCE. A user issues the following SQL statement:

Select * from SH.CUSTOMERS where REIGN='NORTH'

Which two statements are correct?

- A. The literal value 'NORTH' is replaced by a system-generated bind variable.
- B. Adaptive cursor sharing happens only if there is a histogram in the REIGN column of the CUSTOMERS table.
- C. Bind peeking will not happen and subsequent executions of the statement with different literal values will use the same plan.
- D. Adaptive cursor sharing happens irrespective of whether there is a histogram in the REIGN column of the CUSTOMERS

*SIMILAR

Causes statements that may differ in some literals, but are otherwise identical, to share a cursor, unless the literals affect either the meaning of the statement or the degree to which the plan is optimized.

*EXACT

Only allows statements with identical text to share the same cursor.

- C. Create a new SharePoint team site and share it by using the Share function and adding the external users to the Contributors group.
- D. Share the existing SharePoint team site by using the Share function and adding the external users to the Contributors group.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

SharePoint Online gives us the ability to share individual documents or sites with external users provided that sharing is enabled at the higher levels, parent sites, site collections, tenant.

In this question, we need to share multiple documents with external users and ensure that the external users can access and edit the documents without affecting the security of other content.

To edit documents, the external users will need Contribute access (by way of membership in the Contributors group). To ensure that other content remains secure, we need to ensure that the other content cannot be accessed by the external users. We can do this by separating the documents that should be accessed by the external users into a separate site. Therefore, we should create a new SharePoint team site, move the project documents to the new site and share the new site.
