NEW QUESTION: 1

The development group supplied you with the latest WAR file for the company web application. It has been thoroughly tested and needs to be placed into production. In the production file system, you copy over the previous WAR file with the new version. You log into the administration console and redeploy the application. Current users continue to access the older version of the application, while new users are taken to the new version. Explain this scenario.

- A. This is not possible. When an application is redeployed, it replaces the old version and all users then access the new version
- B. This is only possible if the application is deployed to a cluster. Cluster deployments allow current users to continue to use the previous version of an application
- C. This is not possible. When an application is redeployed, all users continue to access the old version. Once all current users have exited the system, then all users from that point on access the new version
- D. This is possible if the application is versioned by using the WebLogic Server feature called Production Redeployment.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 2

Two USG firewalls failed to establish an IPSec VPN tunnel through the NAT traversal mode. Run the `display ike sa` command to view the session without any UDP 500 session. What are the possible reasons?

- A. Intermediate line device disables UDP 4500 port
- B. Intermediate line device disables UDP port 500
- C. Intermediate line device disables ESP packets
- D. public network route is unreachable

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

Explanation

Note: IKE messages use UDP port 500. When NAT traversal is not enabled, AH and ESP are directly carried over IP. The protocol numbers are 51 and 50 respectively. In the case of NAT traversal, the first phase--messages and destinations of the IKE exchange process use UDP 4500 for both the source port and the destination port. All IKE messages exchanged with the initiator use 4500 ports. If the initiator is inside the NAT, Then NAT changes the source port of the initiator to another port to communicate with other devices.

After the first phase of IKE is completed, both parties to the communication know the existence of NAT, and then negotiate whether to use NAT traversal in the SA load of the second phase of IKE, by adding two new encapsulation modes: UDP-tunnel and transmission mode. . An ESP header is encapsulated directly after the UDP header. The source port number and destination port number in the UDP packet header are the same as the IKE protocol. Therefore, it is necessary to check whether the intermediate device blocks protocol numbers

51 and 50, and the packets of UDP 500 and UDP 4500 ports pass. Analysis - because `display ike` sees no messages, that is, the first phase of IKE is not completed. The correct answer should be AC
