Account Assignment Rules

Refer to Exhibit to answer this question.

The exhibit shows the rule criteria that are set up for an Account Assignment rule. Which user or users will be assigned as the owner of an Account record if the Region is West and the Priority is High?

- A. Employees X and Y
- B. Employee X
- C. Employee Z
- D. None, the Owner field will be left blank
- E. Employee Y

Answer: B

Explanation:

Rule 1 is evaluated first. It will be evaluated to true. It will be applied and the Account will be assigned to Employee X. Rule 2 will not be applied.

Note: You can change the order in which rules are evaluated by editing the Order field. On the rule that you want to change, enter an order number that is higher than the order number of the rule that is to precede the rule you are changing, and lower than the order number of the rule that is to follow it. For example, if there are three rules, ordered 1 through 3, and you want to change the order so that the rule that is currently number 1 is evaluated after the rule that is currently number 2, change the order of rule number 1 to a value, such as 2.1 (or any value greater than 2 and less than 3).

Explanation:

Consider using libraries to use different versions of a coherent set of routines and definitions.

If you want each application to use a different version of the contained resource, use a static library. Each application that references that static library is deployed with its own private copy of that library. If a static library is updated, each application that references it must be repackaged and redeployed with the updated static library.

Incorrect Answers:

C: If you want to deploy and manage just one copy of those common resources, use a shared library.
