- C. XPath injection attack
- D. buffer overrun attack

Answer: A,C,D

NEW QUESTION: 2

You are designing an AI solution in Azure that will perform image classification.

You need to identify which processing platform will provide you with the ability to update the logic over time.

The solution must have the lowest latency for inferencing without having to batch.

Which compute target should you identify?

- A. central processing units (CPUs)
- B. application-specific integrated circuits (ASICs)
- C. field-programmable gate arrays (FPGAs)
- D. graphics processing units (GPUs)

Answer: C

Explanation:

FPGAs, such as those available on Azure, provide performance close to ASICs. They are also flexible and reconfigurable over time, to implement new logic.

Incorrect Answers:

D: ASICs are custom circuits, such as Google's TensorFlow Processor Units (TPU), provide the highest efficiency. They can't be reconfigured as your needs change.

NEW QUESTION: 4

An organization has recently introduced total quality management (TQM). Its senior management wants to determine an innovative approach to foster total participation throughout the organization. Management should:

- A. Seek isolation from all distractions in order to think the problem through.
- B. Use a disciplined problem-solving approach.
- C. Bring the employees together for a brainstorming session.
- D. Rely on themselves to develop a new approach.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Certain group decision-making processes may be more creative than individual decisions. One creative approach is brainstorming, which breaks down broadly based problems into their essentials. It is an unstructured approach that relies on the spontaneous contribution of ideas from all members of a group.
