How Core Group Policy Works

...

The Gpt.ini File

The Gpt.ini file is located at the root of each Group Policy template. Each Gpt.ini file contains GPO version information. Except for the Gpt.ini files created for the default GPOs, a display name value is also written to the file.

Each Gpt.ini file contains the GPO version number of the Group Policy template.

[General]

Version=65539

Normally, this is identical to the version-number property of the corresponding GroupPolicyContainer object. It is encoded in the same way - as a decimal representation of a 4 byte hexadecimal number, the upper two bytes of which contain the GPO user settings version and the lower two bytes contain the computer settings version. In this example the version is equal to 10003 hexadecimal giving a user settings version of 1 and a computer settings version of 3.

Storing this version number in the Gpt.ini allows the CSEs to check if the client is out of date to the last processing of policy settings or if the currently applied policy settings (cached policies) are up-to-date. If the cached version is different from the version in the Group Policy template or Group Policy container, then policy settings will be reprocessed.
